

Dear colleagues! Dear friends! Congratulations on World Metrology Day!

Dear colleagues! Dear friends!
Congratulations on World Metrology Day!

Metrology is the science of measurement, and measurement is one of the most important ways of cognition. Its importance cannot be overestimated, it plays a huge role in modern society. Science, industry, economics and communications cannot exist without measurements. Billions of measurement operations are performed every second in the world, the results of which are used to ensure the quality and technical level of products, safe and trouble-free operation of transport, substantiation of medical diagnoses, analysis of information flows, etc.

The celebration of this day is a recognition of the results and importance of the professional activities of metrology specialists around the world. Today, any area of human activity is inconceivable without measurements, units of quantities and standards, the service for ensuring the uniformity of measurements, which is the organizing center in the field of measurements in each individual country and throughout the world.

Today, at the solemn meeting dedicated to the World Metrology Day in Polotsk, employees were awarded with certificates of honor and commendations!

May this day bring you a lot of positive emotions, a good mood, a surge of strength and new perspectives in the development of metrology. We wish you peace and kindness, success and prosperity in your responsible work.

Good health and good luck to you and your loved ones!
